The on-site story development workshop takes place at FilmCamp Norway (Tomas Tomassens vei 41, Pb 144, 9334 Øverbygd, Norway) in November 2026 and is scheduled to last approximately one week. The workshop will mainly focus on script development and be led by two experienced tutors.

The creative teams chosen to participate in the programme (director/screenwriter and producer) are required to attend the workshop in person.

Active participation and openness to collaboration with the other participants is essential.

By the end of the workshop, participants should have a clear idea of their story and be ready to move on to the next stage: scriptwriting. At this point, one of the two tutors will be assigned to each film.

The scriptwriting phase runs from December 2026 to the end of March 2027.

Each creative team (director/screenwriter and producer) will work independently on scriptwriting during this period, with four to six online meetings with tutors also planned for each project. These meetings are aimed at moving the short film script towards a final draft.

This development phase also includes additional online consultancies with experts in order to address other specific aspects of the project such as diversity, equity and inclusion.

Phase three: Short film pre-production

The short film pre-production phase consists of a production workshop and a presentation of the projects to selected industry guests.

The on-site production development workshop takes place in Bozen/Bolzano, Italy, during the Bolzano Film Festival Bozen at ZeLIG - School for Documentary in April 2027 and is scheduled to last approximately one week.

The workshop will mainly focus on the development of the film's financing strategy, establishing a production structure and prepare for funding applications based on the requirements of the MASO sponsorship programmes that support each project.

The workshop will be led by two experienced tutors.

The creative teams chosen to participate in the programme (director/screenwriter and producer) will be required to attend the workshop in person. Active participation and openness to collaboration with the other participants is essential.

During the workshop, other speakers may join to address specific aspects of the pre-production, production and post-production phases and sustainable production in line with IDM Film & Music Commission Südtirol's green shooting protocol.

An international co-production presentation will be held during the Industry Days of the 2027 Bolzano Film Festival Bozen. The MASO #3 creative teams will present their projects to an audience of curated industry guests. The presentations will be followed by one-on-one meetings between the creative teams and the participating professionals. The aim is to promote the participating projects as well to encourage cinematic dialogue and enable insights and information to be shared.

Following the 2nd on-site workshop in Bolzano, the actual pre-production of the short films begins – in line with the individual schedules and team decisions on the part of the team.

The creative teams will put the specific strategies tailored to their projects during the development and production workshops into practice and start to apply for funding, as well as beginning pre-production of their short films.

Creative teams that have received financial support to attend MASO #3 can apply for production funding directly from the specific short film fund that awarded them this support. The rules and regulations for applying to each film fund differ from fund to fund and will be explained during MASO #3.

For the list of financial support opportunities for MASO #3, please refer to the 'How much does MASO cost?' section of this document below.

To raise their film budgets, creative teams may also find other sources of funding in addition to the respective sponsoring institutions. Any other sources of funding must be compatible with the MASO #3 timeline and not compromise the realisation of the film within the intended timeframe.

Beyond the MASO #3 programme: Short film production & promotion

Each creative team is free to organise the production and post-production phases as they see fit. Creative teams are, however, obliged to implement a protocol for sustainable filmmaking in line with IDM Film & Music Commission Südtirol's green shooting protocol for the production and post-production of the film.

The creative teams are expected to remain in contact with the MASO team throughout this phase to discuss any potential problems and to give updates, with reporting to IDM on the development of each project to be carried out twice per year.

The expected completion date for the production phase is the beginning of 2028.

By participating in the MASO #3 programme, the creative teams agree to include a reference to the MASO programme (text and MASO programme logo) in the opening and closing credits of their films. Furthermore, the MASO logo must be present in any digital and printed communication (examples: poster, trailer, press kit, etc.) relating to the finished film.

The distribution strategy of the film will be developed by the creative team itself. The MASO team can be consulted on distribution strategy if requested by the film's creative team.

As far as short film distribution is concerned, the Bolzano Film Festival Bozen must be part of the festival distribution strategy of the projects developed within MASO #3 at any stage of their festival run (no premiere status required).
